WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

One Hundred Twenty-Eighth Commencement

May Nineteenth
Nineteen Hundred Eighty-Nine
Eight-Thirty Friday Morning
A Brief History of Washington University

Founded in 1853, the University was located in downtown St. Louis for its first fifty years. Ground for a new site on the edge of the city was purchased in 1894 and in 1900 construction was begun on the first five buildings of a plan based upon the medieval courtyards of Oxford and Cambridge Colleges.

These first ivy covered Gothic buildings with their red granite walls, arches and gargoyles formed the quadrangle. Upon completion, these original buildings were leased to the 1904 World's Fair. The lease money made it possible to begin construction of additional buildings and all were used for the Fair before the University moved in. The athletic stadium, Francis Field, was built to accommodate the 1904 Olympic games, presented in conjunction with the Fair.

Over the years, the original “Academic Gothic” architecture has been succeeded by a variety of eclectic styles, but certain key principles of the original plan were retained. Plazas and courtyards still reflect the original theme.

A Note on the Commencement Ceremony

Washington University and other American universities, public and private, follow the pattern of degree granting developed at the University of Paris, which was founded about 1100.

In the early days of the University of Paris the discipline of the students, and indeed their entire education fell under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Paris who was responsible for local educational matters. In an attempt to perform his office, the Bishop claimed supervision of curriculum and degree-granting. Here he ran into trouble from the teachers who felt they were the proper judges of the qualifications of their students. They demanded the right to grant the degree.

The modern commencement ceremony represents a compromise between the Bishop and the teaching masters. By 1200 the masters were judging the merits of the student and then recommending him to the Bishop who conferred the degree. The ceremony you will witness this morning is the successor to this medieval compromise. The Faculty sits on the platform in its role as teacher and examiner. Its leaders, the Deans, present the qualified candidates to the Chancellor, acting as executive officer of the Board. Today the Chancellor and the Board act, as did the medieval Bishop when, acting together, they grant accreditation upon the student’s completion of the Faculty's requirements.
A Note on Academic Dress

The academic dress worn by Faculty and candidates indicates the degree held, the subject in which it is held, and the institution granting it. Gowns are of three kinds: the Bachelor's with full, pointed sleeves, hanging open; the Master's with flowing sleeves which hang below the opening at the wrist; the Doctor's with very full sleeves gathered at the wrist. The gowns are black, although occasionally trimmed with colored velvet. The hoods, on the other hand, are of many colors. The color of the lining of the hood indicates the institution granting the degree: e.g., the hood of Washington University is lined with red and green. The color of the tassel on the cap and of the velvet edging of the hood, carried forward around the throat, indicates the division of the university.

Banners

In addition to the coloring present in the academic dress, the division is also represented on the University's Commencement banners. These banners are carried by a student marshal at the head of the procession for their division. You will note that the side sections of the banners are red and green, the University's colors, and that the center section, which bears the seal of the University, is the color of the academic division.

HONORARY DEGREES
KENNETH JOSEPH ARROW

DOCTOR OF LAWS

Kenneth J. Arrow's contributions to general equilibrium theory have been called "the most important work in economics in the last 40 years." It was for that work and his work on social choice theory that Arrow, the Joan Kenney Professor of Economics and professor of operations research at Stanford University, was awarded the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science in 1972. "It is difficult to think of another person who has had as much durable impact on as many academic fields as Arrow," says Robert L. Virgil, dean of Washington University's School of Business. "He has played a significant role in the development of the entire area of the economics of organizations." Arrow's work also established the basis for the entire field of information economics. Considered one of the fathers of operations research, Arrow has done fundamental work in decision making under uncertainty and the role of security markets, as well as applied work in the areas of learning-by-doing and the economics of insurance. Arrow began his professional career as research associate for the Cowles Commission for Research in Economics in 1947. In 1949 he joined the faculty of Stanford University, where he advanced to a full professor of economics, statistics and operations research by 1953. In describing his work at Stanford, The Writers Directory 1986-1988 states: "Outstanding among his achievements, and one with implications beyond economics, was his 'impossibility theorem,' by which he was able to demonstrate, in a brilliant and inventive mathematical proof, that a perfect system of democratic choice-making is in principle impossible." Arrow moved to Harvard University in 1968, where he was professor of economics and the James Bryant Conant University Professor from 1974 until 1979. Since 1979 he has held the Kenney professorship at Stanford. Arrow is the author of 20 books, including Social Choice and Individual Values, Studies in Linear and Nonlinear Programming, Essays in the Theory of Risk-Bearing, and Studies in Resource Allocation Processes. He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Philosophical Society and the Institute of Medicine, and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. A Phi Beta Kappa, Arrow received his bachelor's degree in social science from the College of the City of New York, where he received the Gold Pell Medal for highest grades, and his master's in mathematics and doctorate in economics from Columbia University. Arrow's influence, says Virgil, "has extended well beyond the perimeters of business scholarship. He has been recognized world-wide for his contributions that touch many fields."

JOHN BERNARD ERVIN

DOCTOR OF HUMANITIES

From teaching in a one-room schoolhouse to accepting a presidential appointment, John B. Ervin has spent his long career as a champion of equal opportunity in education. A nationally recognized educator, Ervin was dean of the School of Continuing Education and Summer School at Washington University from 1968 to 1977. He was vice president of the Danforth Foundation, a national philanthropic education organization, from 1977 until his retirement in 1986. As vice president, he provided leadership for the Foundation's work in urban education and was director of the Danforth Graduate Fellowship Program. He also served as monitor of the Dorothy Danforth Compton Fellowship grant series with 10 universities, which helped provide graduate fellowships to Black, Mexican-American, Native American and Puerto Rican students. In 1986, Washington University established the John B. Ervin Scholarship Program, which provides full-tuition scholarships for talented college-bound black high school students. The scholarship program was established in Ervin's honor for "his recognition of education as a worthwhile undertaking, and his lifelong commitment to achievement of excellence and quality education." Currently, 22 students are attending Washington under the merit-based scholarship program. An additional 10 Ervin scholars are expected on campus for the 1989-90 school year. A native of Birmingham, Ala., Ervin has a bachelor's degree from Kent State University and a master's degree and doctorate from Columbia University. He came to St. Louis in 1949 after teaching in Ohio's public schools. He was dean of instruction at what is now known as Harris-Stowe State College when he joined Washington University in 1965 as associate dean of continuing education and director of the summer school. He is past president of the National University Extension Association and was appointed by both Presidents Ford and Carter to the National Advisory Council on Extension and Continuing Education, for which he served as chairman from 1978-79. A life member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Ervin has been active in dozens of community and national professional organizations, including the White House Conference on Education and the Regional Commerce and Growth Association. He has served on the board of trustees of such organizations as St. Louis Children’s Hospital, the St. Louis Art Museum and the United Way of Greater St. Louis.

HELEN FRANKENTHALER

DOCTOR OF FINE ARTS

In the early 1960s, Helen Frankenthaler was at the forefront of a trend in American painting moving from abstract expressionism to what is now known as color-field painting. In The History of Modern Art, Frankenthaler is described as a “transitional figure between abstract expressionism and color-field painting. She was the first American painter after Jackson Pollock to see the implications of the color-staining of raw canvas to create an integration of color and ground in which foreground and background ceased to exist.” In addition to her numerous one-woman exhibitions around the world, Frankenthaler’s paintings are in the permanent collections of most major museums in the country, including The Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Modern Art and the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York City; the St. Louis Art Museum; the Chicago Art Institute; and the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. Her work also is in public collections in Australia, Austria, England, France, Germany, Israel, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, Northern Ireland and South Africa. She has been the subject of several films, including “Frankenthaler: Toward a New Climate,” produced and directed by Perry Miller Adato in 1978 as part of a seven-part series on women in art. The film won first prize in the fine arts category of the 1979 American Film Festival. Another film highlighting Frankenthaler’s achievements was “A Woman’s Place,” a documentary on “Remarkable American Women” produced by Time Inc. Born in New York City, Frankenthaler received her bachelor’s degree from Bennington (Vt.) College. She was elected a trustee of Bennington College in 1967 and was the first woman to be elected a Fellow at Calhoun College, Yale University, in 1968. Frankenthaler is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, the National Council on the Arts and the Corporation of Yaddo in Saratoga Springs, N.Y. She is the recipient of numerous awards, including the Garrett Award in the 70th American Exhibition at the Art Institute of Chicago in 1972, the “Extraordinary Woman of Achievement” award at the 50th anniversary of the National Conference of Christians and Jews in 1978 and the 1979 Bennington College Alumni Award for Outstanding Achievement. She has presented seminars and lectures at universities around the country, including Washington University, where her work is part of the permanent collection of the Gallery of Art.

HENRY EUGENE HAMPTON

DOCTOR OF HUMANITIES

Henry E. Hampton has a dream. “I’m not just interested in making good films,” he says. “I have an equal need to have them seen and have an impact on people.” As executive producer of “Eyes on the Prize: America’s Civil Rights Years (1954-1965),” the Washington University alumnus has seen his dream become a reality. “Eyes on the Prize,” a six-part documentary series that aired nationally on PBS beginning in January 1987, was seen by an estimated 20 million viewers. The series used a mix of historical footage and recent interviews with participants to chronicle the major events that followed the 1954 Supreme Court ruling that outlawed segregation in public schools, concluding with the passage of the Voting Rights Act in 1965. The program won 23 awards, including being named “Program of the Year” by the Television Critics Association, “Best Documentary” by TV Guide and “Best of Festival” by the American Film and Video Festival. The series, which aired again in 1988, also earned an Academy Award nomination for Best Documentary, and episodes five and six won Emmy awards from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. As public information director for the liberal Unitarian-Universalist Association in the mid-1960s, Hampton had witnessed and written about the civil rights movement. He also had learned how influential the media could be in effecting social change. So, in 1968, with a $12,000 contract to produce four television shots and with a vision of producing films that would generate change in the hearts of viewers, Hampton founded Blackside Inc. In his 20 years as president of Blackside, Hampton has produced or been responsible for more than 50 major films and media projects, including several multiple film series for J. Walter Thompson, the National Institute of Mental Health and the U.S. Department of Commerce. He served as executive producer of “Voices of a Divided City,” which aired nationally on PBS in 1982, and was executive producer and writer for “Kinfolks,” a documentary that examined the state of the black family. “Kinfolks” was selected for a CEBA Award in 1979 as the best long-form documentary on minority Americans. He currently is finishing work on a second “Eyes on the Prize” program. The eight-part series, which covers the civil rights movement from 1965 to 1980, will air on PBS in January 1990. Hampton, who earned a bachelor’s degree in premed and English literature from Washington University in 1961, was the 1987 recipient of the Roger Baldwin Award of the Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union and the Holmes Weatherly Award from the Unitarian Universalist Association. He is the board chairman of the Museum of Afro American History, founding trustee and director of the Boston Center for the Arts, board member of several community organizations and has been actively involved in athletic programs for the disabled.

SEYMOUR SOLOMON KETY
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE

Seymour S. Kety’s first major scientific contribution was the development of a safe quantitative technique for measuring the circulation and metabolic function of the human brain, using a biologically inert tracer, nitrous oxide. After control studies with normal subjects, the technique was then productively applicable to many physiological and disease states, including both neurological and psychiatric illnesses. He then led the evolution of this technology so that local circulation in tiny parts of the brain could be measured in animals. With advances in radiochemistry and nuclear medicine technology, the modern PET scanner made it possible to safely measure local circulation and metabolic functions of high complexity in normal humans and in patients with serious diseases of the nervous system. Kety’s insistence upon quantitative techniques in a field where this goal seemed unattainable led to the establishment of an entire specialized field of metabolic neurobiology, with both basic science and clinical branches that are moving rapidly forward. Later Kety became interested in the significance of genetic factors in major psychiatric illnesses. He then led a group which established from careful studies of adopted children in Denmark that there is a powerful genetic factor in the cause of schizophrenia. Kety’s administrative leadership in neuroscience had even broader impact. Over a decade and a half, beginning in 1951, he held leadership positions in the intramural research programs of both the National Institute of Mental Health and the National Institute of Neurologic Diseases and Stroke. His wisdom and style in the selection of strong neuroscience leaders at NIH and, in turn, the large numbers of research fellows that they trained, are as significant as Kety’s own scientific accomplishments. His lifelong generosity to his colleagues and students has been matched only by his standard of scientific elegance. Kety, who received his bachelor’s and doctor of medicine degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, delivered the Twentieth Annual George H. Bishop Lecture in Experimental Neurology at the Washington University School of Medicine in 1975. A Phi Beta Kappa, he is a Distinguished Fellow of the American Psychiatric Association and a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, and the Society for Neuroscience. Among his many awards are the 1973 Jessie Stevenson Kovalenko Award of the National Academy of Sciences, the 1980 Passano Award, the 1980 Distinguished Service Award of the American Psychiatric Association, the 1988 National Academy of Sciences Award in Neurosciences and the 1988 de Hevesy Award of the Society for Nuclear Medicine. In April of this year, he received the first Award of the International Congress of Schizophrenia Research.

HOWARD ALLEN SCHNEIDERMAN
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE

Howard A. Schneiderman, chief scientist and senior vice president of research and development of Monsanto Company and adjunct professor of biochemistry at Washington University School of Medicine, is recognized internationally for creating and promoting alliances between research universities and American industry to solve important societal and commercial problems. A founding member of the Council of the Government-University-Industry Research Roundtable of the National Academy of Sciences, Schneiderman has led Monsanto and Washington University in the development of one of the most powerful university/industry research programs in the world. This alliance has created a sound model for similar arrangements both in the United States and abroad. Schneiderman also is recognized as a leader in the development of America’s biotechnology industry. While at Monsanto, he has directed programs that have led to basic scientific discoveries in the development of high-performance agricultural crops and increased livestock productivity, as well as focused attention on problems in human and animal health care and environmental clean-up. Prior to joining Monsanto, he was dean of the School of Biological Sciences and director of the Center for Pathobiology at the University of California-Irvine, and had held positions at Cornell University and Case Western Reserve University. He remains professor on leave at the University of California, where he maintains an active professional interest in research in developmental biology. A fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a member of the National Academy of Sciences, Schneiderman is on the National Council for the School of Engineering and Applied Science at Washington University. He serves on the boards of many organizations and institutions including the Missouri Botanical Garden and the Carnegie Institution of Washington. In 1987 he was appointed by President Ronald Reagan to a six-year term on the National Science Board. He has been a member of many editorial and advisory boards and continues to edit a series of textbooks in biology. Schneiderman, who was the Viktor Hamburger Lecturer at Washington University in 1981, is the author of more than 200 published research papers on various subjects, including developmental biology and genetics, insect biochemistry and plant growth. He also has published articles on industrial biotechnology and on university/industry interactions. A Phi Beta Kappa, Schneiderman has a bachelor's degree in mathematics and natural sciences from Swarthmore College, and a master's in zoology and a doctorate in physiology from Harvard University.

SONDRA JUDITH STANG

DOCTOR OF LETTERS

While teaching a course on the modern novel in the mid-1960s at Washington University, Sondra J. Stang, adjunct professor of English, discovered a gap in modern literary history that she has spent more than 20 years of her life trying to fill. One of the texts she used was The Good Soldier by Ford Madox Ford. Ford, the author of more than 80 books and founding editor of two prominent literary journals, had a career that spanned three generations of writers. He also helped promote the careers of, among others, writers Thomas Hardy, D.H. Lawrence, e.e. cummings, James Joyce, Ernest Hemingway, Ezra Pound, Eudora Welty and Gertrude Stein. After World War II, however, Ford’s esteem had fallen despite his many literary contributions. Of all his work only The Good Soldier remained in print and, in the 1950s, a major literary history relegated him to a four-line footnote, and that uncomplimentary. Stang’s reading of The Good Soldier differed intensely from that of the volume’s introduction. So intensely that, in her words, “The adrenaline started flowing. I was burned up. The critic who wrote that introduction hadn’t understood something very central in the book. I felt I had to set the record straight.” Fortunately for Stang, the Rare Book Room in Washington University’s Olin Library has one of the few nearly complete collections of Ford’s work in the world, and, determined to correct what she perceived as the incidental treatment of a major literary figure, she set out to read all of Ford’s published work in chronological order. Now considered the world authority on the previously slighted author, Stang has read all of Ford’s published work and most of his unpublished. She has overseen the publication of five new volumes on Ford in the past 11 years, including the 1977 Ford Madox Ford, a thorough and sympathetic summary of Ford’s life and work, and The Presence of Ford Madox Ford, a 1981 volume of memorial essays and reminiscences intended to amplify the existing record. Along with Solon Beinfeld, associate professor of history at Washington University, Stang edited the recently released A History of Our Own Times, Ford’s previously unpublished 350-page volume depicting the shift of values and power between 1870 and 1895. In what has been called a “Ford Madox Ford revival,” Stang has served an advisory role in reissue programs taking place in both the U.S. and England of Ford’s lesser-known novels and other books. Stang, who is married to Washington University Professor of English Richard Stang, received her bachelor’s degree in English literature and French literature from Hunter College and a master’s degree in 17th-century literature from Columbia University.

THE ALMA MATER

Dear Alma Mater, Thy name is sweet to me.
Those days of youth which All of us spent with thee.

Our hearts are all for thee Fair Washington.
Form a dear history, Fair Washington.

Thy halls shall honored be Throughout this great country.
Could they renewed be, We'd live our days with thee.

For all eternity, Our Washington.
For all eternity, Our Washington.
