Subject librarians regularly consult with faculty and students about their research needs and respond by providing tools and specialized services. They also stay abreast of faculty research in order to make continual, relevant recommendations.

- Library Instruction
  Subject librarians provide resources for teaching and offer instruction on library resources tailored to your classes and disciplines.

- Collection Development
  Subject librarians develop, maintain, and manage distinct collections that are of great value to the Washington University community, in collaboration and consultation with the Washington University Libraries’ Technical and Access Services departments. They support research and instruction by offering resources in relevant formats and languages and strive to make those materials easily accessible.

- Research Data Help
  Subject librarians maintain a working knowledge of issues that arise during the research data lifecycle and can assist in identifying useful tools. Subject librarians work closely with colleagues in the University Libraries’ Data Services unit to assist users with their research data needs and provide referrals to the appropriate experts.

- Scholarly Communication Support
  Subject librarians educate our community about the changing nature of scholarship. Collaborating with the University Library’s Scholarly Communication Services department, they inform users about open access publishing, public access practices, and options for publishing, curating, and sharing research and scholarly output.

- Outreach
  Subject librarians liaise with faculty and students in their areas of expertise to identify, meet, and facilitate ongoing communications about the resource and service needs of users.

Contact your subject librarian to learn more about how we can help ensure your success.
